Kellaki is a charming village in the Limassol district, situated approximately 30 kilometers from Limassol at an altitude of about 650 meters Cyprus Passion. The village is located 10 km north of Parekklesia and offers stunning panoramic views toward the Troodos mountain range, including Kionia and Madari peaks.

History & Heritage

Kellaki is renowned for its excellent climatic conditions and historically produced the most delicious tomatoes on the island Cyprus Passion. The village's residents cultivate various crops including tomatoes, apples, peaches, pears, nectarines, and cherries, along with vineyards and vegetable plantations.

The village offers medical services, cafes, restaurants with accommodation, a community stadium, cultural center, carpentry workshops, and a traditional Cypriot bakery. A large picnic area with disabled access and stunning views toward Limassol is located on the road to nearby Sanida village.

With approximately 350 inhabitants, Kellaki provides a peaceful mountain lifestyle while remaining conveniently connected to Limassol via a modern motorway. The village combines traditional architecture with modern conveniences, making it an attractive location for those seeking tranquility, cooler mountain temperatures, and stunning natural surroundings with easy access to the city and coast.
